ABSTRACT

A directory of doctoral programs in nursing lists programs alphabetically by state and institution, indicating private or state control, the name and title of the program administrator, available study emphases, and degree type offered (Ph.D., D.N.S., Ed.D., etc.). Twenty-one programs in 15 states are included. Also listed are federal agencies offering pre- and postdoctoral nurse stipends, fellowships, and awards. Three institutions offering National Research Service Awards for postsecondary research training are noted. (MSE)

doctoral programs in nursing

The National League for Nursing does not accredit programs beyond the master's level. The quality of a doctoral program is dependent on many factors and is related to the character of the university and its graduate school. Hence, programs vary from one institution to another. The universities listed below offer doctoral programs administered by the educational unit in nursing. For specific information, write to the administrator of the particular unit in nursing.
